the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are poor has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

There are a number of reasons for this. One is that the world population has increased from 5 billion to 6 billion. Another is that the number of people who are poor has increased in many of the world's poorest countries. This is because of a number of factors, including the fact that many of these countries have experienced economic stagnation or decline, and that many of them have high population growth rates.

There are a number of ways in which we can help to reduce the number of people who are poor. One way is to help to improve the economic situation in the world's poorest countries. This can be done by providing them with technical assistance, and by helping them to attract foreign investment. Another way is to help to improve the living conditions of the world's poorest people. This can be done by providing them with access to basic services such as education, health care, and housing.

There are a number of organizations that are working to help the world's poorest people. These include the United Nations, the World Bank, and a number of non-governmental organizations. These organizations are working to help the world's poorest people in a number of ways, including by providing them with technical assistance, and by helping them to attract foreign investment.

There are a number of things that we can do to help to reduce the number of people who are poor. We can help to improve the economic situation in the world's poorest countries. We can help to improve the living conditions of the world's poorest people. We can help to provide them with access to basic services such as education, health care, and housing.
